

BULB

Planting Tips

Soil: Make sure it is loose and well-draining.

Planting: The planting depth of bulbs depends on their size: a good rule of thumb is that the depth should be 3x the diameter of the bulb. However, planting depths vary by variety.

For more specific planting depths, check the label on your bulb package. The spacing of the bulbs depends largely on the effect you are trying to achieve. For best results plant in clumps of large groups rather than in single rows.

After loosening the soil gently press the bulbs (with pointed ends up) in the bed, cover them with the removed soil and tap it down slightly. Be sure to water thoroughly.

Additional Tips: A larger grouping of flower bulbs are far more fab than just a few planted here and there. For smaller groupings, try container plantings using pots, baskets or window boxes.

Lay out your bulbs on top of the soil where you want to plant them. After, poke a twig into the soil to mark where you've already planted.

For a natural look throw out handfuls of bulbs and plant them where they fall.
